If the mayor asked me "how the town I live in could be made better for kids?" I would say build a little bank for kids next to Jewel's. The bank will teach kids responsibility. Responsibility is taking care something you own. Building a bank for kids can teach them how to be responsible with their money. This could help children so that when they get older that make them be more responsible. Kids could take money out and put money in anytime they want with the help of their parents. The name of the bank will be B.F.K. (Bank for kids). We could raise money to build the bank by having fund raisers and carnivals. This could also make parents happy because it's teaching their kids how to be responsible. The kids will be happy because they're learning how to do something. This is a great thing for a lot of kids.
