

“How The Bull Got its Horns”

By Nadia & Kayla

A long time ago, in a desert of Mexico, there lived a bull, a cow, and a mountain goat. Bull and goat were best friends. Cow always bragged to bull that he had horns and bull didn't. Bull always complained about not having horns like Goat.

Cow said, “Let's have a fighting match tomorrow”. Bull accepted. Goat didn't want to see his friend lose, so that night goat took some mud and shaped it into two pointed triangles.

In the morning goat found some sap to glue on the horns. They painted the horns white. The horns had a lot of weight, so they pulled his head down. Goat told bull that was a good way to charge on cow and show off your horns.

Later that evening the match began. Cow charged at bull. Bull dodged out the way. While cow was looking at the audience, bull charged at cow. It was a direct hit to cow's rear. Bull had won. Cow limped quietly off. From that day on cow was quiet, and bulls have horns.
